ONE woman is determined to wean Malaysians off the "ammah syndrome" when it comes to keeping their surroundings clean.

The "ammah syndrome" or maid syndrome is the habit of hiring maids or labourers to clean up the neighbourhood during gotong-royong sessions.

Recycle Community Malaysia Lestari (RCOMM Lestari) president and co-founder Wan Amiza Fawzan Chik said she found this habit, which is ingrained in Malaysian society, distasteful and irresponsible, and hopes to put a stop to it.

"During my grandparents' time, recycling and cleaning up neighbourhoods were a big part of our community.

"It was a routine they took pride in doing.

"But sadly, it's no longer being practised. "Today's generation grew up in households where the maids do all the cleaning, so the perception is that cleaning is beneath them," she said.

Wan Amiza is determined to change this attitude and get people, particularly the younger generation to be involved in community activities especially in environmental issues.

Established in 2010, the non-governmental organisation RCOMM Lestari has been pushing the "2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development" that was adopted at a special United Nations summit on Sept 25, 2015.

It includes 17 sustainable development goals that are towards achieving social, economic and environmental dimensions.

"We are looking at chapter 11, whereby we are working hard to make cities and human settlements inclusive, safe, resilient and sustainable by 2030.

"We have a framework to get communities and its stakeholders as well as government agencies to work together to achieve a sustainable and waste-free Malaysia," Wan Amiza explained.

However, she said, the community often posed challenges in achieving these goals.

Having worked with LA21, Kuala Lumpur City Hall (DBKL) and in several other townships, Wan Amiza noted that Malaysians often chose the easy way out, which was to hire people to do their dirty work.

"I have witnessed this in many gotong-royong sessions.

"The organisers pay labourers to carry out cleanups," she said, relating one incident when community leaders had a difficult time persuading residents to take part in a cleanup and ended up bringing in five busloads of workers to do the job.

"In some neighbourhoods, residents would send their maids over to do the work.

"There are instances when cleaning sessions are carried out in commercial areas but participation from the business community, particularly the

Residents reduce carbon footprint

THE friendly residents of Flat Taman Mulla in Bandar Tun Razak, Kuala Lumpur, enjoy giving away little gifts to their guests.

These include handmade baskets and a very unique gift - plastic bottles stuffed solid with plastic.

What might seem like a strange present is actually the residents' green effort in a project called Ecobrick.

Everyday, about 40 residents from block A, B and G of the flats collect single-use plastic items such as food and drink packaging, disposable utensils, sweet and chocolate wrappers and straws.

These items are then stuffed into plastic water bottles which will then be used to as building blocks.

"We are not sure what we plan to build using the stuffed bottles but it will be something that we can use for our garden project," said the flat's residents association chairman Idris Dhari, adding that ideas included building a sign for the garden and a partition for the vegetable plot.

Ecobrick is a pilot project where the residents work together with environmental organisation Recycle Community Malaysia Lestari (RCOMM Lestari).

Idris said the project kicked off last year and the residents have collected about 100 bottles thus far.

"It is always hard at the beginning but when you see the big picture, what's happening at landfills, rivers and drains, you will understand better and realise that you have to act fast to do something about it," said Rahimah Samad, another RA member who is passionate about sustainable living.

"I read somewhere that Malaysians use more than 31 million plastic straws every day and the figure for plastic bag usage runs in the billions.

"Plastic can take hundreds of years to decompose so we must act now," Rahimah added.

With guidance from RCOMM Lestari, the community has been aggressively working towards reducing their waste with the ultimate goal to stop anymore more waste from entering the landfill and stop pollution.

Idris leads his team of fellow residents in carrying out projects like the ecobrick, composting and gardening to reduce waste and teach the community to create a more sustainable environment.

"The baskets made have been sold as door gifts for weddings," he said, referring to the items made from recycled paper.

RCOMM Lestari is also teaching residents to compost their organic waste.

Airtight plastic bottles containing fermented fruits, vegetables, tempe, sugar and yeast are made in batches to be used as natural fertilisers to spur plant growth.

The residents have also-restaurants, is poor," she added. In Kuala Lumpur, DBKL spends a whopping RM160mil a year to clear rubbish and Wan Amiza said 57% of waste thrown at landfills in Malaysia were organic waste.

"Waste at the landfills are increasing every year and local councils are spending large amounts of money on the ever increasing tipping fees.

"Things are only going to get worse if we do not take a more holistic approach in educating our waste problem," she said.

To that effect, RCOMM Lestari is taking the lead for World Cleanup Day 2018 and organising a massive cleanup session nationwide on Sept 15.

In Kuala Lumpur, it will be held on Sept 16.

The nationwide programme will be part of the global effort where 150 countries are set to undergo a massive cleanup through a similar initiative.

On the local front, RCOMM Lestari will rally support and participation from the community and collaborate with government agencies to carry out gotong-royong sessions in various states.

"The event on Sept 16 at Dataran Merdeka is in conjunction with the city's car-free morning.

"We aim to mobilise 5% or 100,000 of the city's two million residents to take part in the event.

"The local community should be part of the event and not hire people from other areas to do it.

"We do not want this trend to continue any longer.

"Societies must be taught to emulate civic consciousness and inspire good social behaviour," she said.

World Cleanup Day was initiated by the Let's Do It Foundation; a global civic movement that started in Estonia in 2008 when 50,000 people came together to clean up the entire country in just five hours.

The foundation's mission is to connect and empower people and organisations around the world to clean up the planet.

Since then, Let's Do It has spread the model of cleaning up one country in one day around the world.

To date, nearly 120 countries and 20 million people have joined the movement.

Thirteen-year-old Mohd Kamil Mukhriz Abdul Manan is growing vegetables including tomatoes, chillies and curry leaves as well as fruits such as guava and mangoes.

"I see my parents doing it and I want to contribute, too," the young boy said.

Mohd Kamil Mukhriz grows various fruits and vegetables in the community garden such as this daum kesum plant.

The residents compost their waste and have been given instructions on how to make the enzyme using fermented fruits, vegetables, tempe, sugar and yeast.

(安邦9日讯) 纷扰多年的安邦新村16路拆迁风波，受影响的5户家庭经过逾3年努力争取下，雪州土地局终于批准拨出一块位于安邦六福园(Taman Seraya)的土地及发出地契，让村民安心。

居民代表俞小雯(35岁)指出，当地村民居住超过40年，1998年曾向土地局申请地契但不成功，岂料，2012年被一名外地

她说，由于事态严重，村民就向千百家区州议员依斯干達求助，多年来给予正确引导与协助，不断努力争取下也找到合适的土地安顿5户家庭。

俞小雯周二联同5名村民赠送牌匾给依斯干達，以表示谢意。

出席者村民刘金妹、俞振明和罗生等。村民叶观清(79岁，退休人士)指出，经过多年的辛苦争取，他感谢依斯干達和莲花苑区州议员张菲倩协助下，也获得地契。

他说，自一家6口被逼搬离后，就在外面租房子，每月租金1300令吉，虽然手中拿到地契稍安心，之后还是要等房屋建筑费，毕竟现在只有一片空地而已。

依斯干達说，该风波纷纷扰扰长达3年多，村民终于获得应有赔偿，土地局在六福园拨出一块土地给村民。
